

Dr. Burgess Weekly Video Address December 25, 2013

“Merry Christmas”

Hello, this is your congressman, Michael Burgess. During the Christmas season, I am always struck by the spirit of unity that lies at the heart of all Americans. It is a time for family and friends and reconnecting to those things that matter most.

As you and your family spend time together to celebrate this Christmas, I wanted to tell you how honored I was to spend another holiday season with you. God has given us many blessings this year, and I hope that you had time to look to those less fortunate. Lending a helping hand can go a long way during the holiday season.

The fact is the United States is still facing hardship. My hope for this upcoming year remains the same. We must strive for a better America that promotes a pro-growth, pro-job creation agenda, and as your congressman, I am committed to creating a greater country for our loved ones.

Today, we must also recognize and honor our troops who help keep our nation safe. Many of you are away from your loved ones during the holiday season. I thank you and your families, for your sacrifice and your pledge to the American people.

I want to wish everyone a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Thank you for taking the time to listen. May God bless you and your family, and as always especially at Christmas, may God bless Texas.
