Highlights

1. Defeat the Terrorists and Neutralize the Insurgents

A suicide car bomber struck a U.S. military patrol base in Diyala province north of Baghdad, killing nine soldiers and wounding 20 others, in the deadliest attack on American forces in 16 months.

2. Transition Iraq to Security Self-Reliance

The Shaibah logistics base, once the main center of British military operations in Iraq, was turned over to the Iraqi national army April 24 for use as a training base. The brief ceremony by British and Iraqi forces was the latest example of the Coalition's efforts to give Iraqi forces control over some parts of Iraq as British forces plan to begin withdrawing from southern Iraq where most of them are based.

3. Help Iraqis to Forge a National Compact for Democratic Government

Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki announced that he will not replace the six Sadrist ministers who withdrew from the cabinet with members of the Iran-backed United Iraqi Alliance or with independents close to Muqtada al-Sadr. The Sadrist ministers withdrew in protest of the Prime Minister's refusal to set a timetable for an American withdrawal from Iraq.

4. Help Iraq Build Government Capacity and Provide Essential Services

The U.S. Army-funded construction of the Primary Healthcare Clinic R-WA04 al-Haidariya in al-Kut, Governorate of Wasit has been completed, providing improved availability of health care and enhancing the quality of life to its area residents.

Highlights

5. Help Iraq Strengthen Its Economy

Beginning April 18, Iraqi members of parliament, officials, and experts met in Dubai in a series of technical meetings to discuss the draft Hydrocarbon Framework and Revenue Sharing laws.

6. Help Iraq Strengthen the Rule of Law

Criminal proceedings were initiated in Baghdad April 2 in a newly opened and secure Rule of Law complex, Mujama Siyadat al-Qanun, against an alleged al-Qaida suspect accused of killing scores of civilians, and against a Shi'a national police officer accused of torturing and abusing mostly Sunni detainees while in his custody.

7. International Support for Iraq

During a visit to Cairo by Prime Minister Maliki, Egyptian Prime Minister Ahmad Nazif pledged to continue supporting Iraq in order to restore peace and stability to the country. Prime Minister Nazif added that "Egypt stands strongly on the side of Iraq and by every means backs it in achieving peace and stability."

8. Strengthen Public Understanding of Coalition Efforts and Public Isolation of the Insurgents

An Internet video posted April 19 by the Islamic State of Iraq announced an "Islamic Cabinet" for Iraq and named the head of al-Qaida in Iraq as "minister of war." The message came shortly after the Sunni insurgent group posted another video showing the execution of 20 men said to be members of the Iraqi military and security forces.

[1.] Defeat the Terrorists and Neutralize the Insurgency

Fardh al-Qanun Efforts Against Extremists Continue:

- Iraqi Security Forces and Coalition efforts to reduce the violence continue as Operation Fardh al-Qanun enters its ninth week. Joint Security Stations, manned by Coalition and Iraqi forces, continue to stand up throughout the city and establish a permanent presence in troubled neighborhoods. Another initiative to improve security is the emplacement of temporary concrete barriers around Baghdad neighborhoods that have experienced high levels of violence.
- Attacks against Baghdad civilians have declined 50% over the last six months. In November 2006, 41% of all attacks reported in the city were directed against civilians; however, during the month of April, only 20% targeted the civilian population.
 - While attacks have continued to decline over the first nine weeks of the new security plan, lethal high-profile attacks have continued, highlighted by the four vehicle-borne improvised explosive bombings in the Baghdad area April 18. Al-Qaida in Iraq, who likely conducted those bombings, continues to indiscriminately target civilians to undermine the GOI and dishearten the Iraqi people.
- To date, more than 200,000 patrols have been conducted in support of Operation Fardh al-Qanun. More than 300 caches have been uncovered and more than 800 improvised explosive devices have been found.

[1.] Defeat the Terrorists and Neutralize the Insurgency

Suicide Vehicle Bomb Strikes U.S. Military Outpost, Killing Nine:

- A suicide car bomber struck a U.S. military outpost north of Baghdad, killing nine soldiers and wounding 20 others, in the deadliest attack on American forces in 16 months.
 - The bomber exploded his vehicle against a patrol base in Diyala province April 23, bringing the U.S. military death toll for April so far to 70, according to the U.S. military. Fifteen of the wounded were later able to resume their duties, but the attack was still the bloodiest since December 1, 2005.

[2.] Transition to Security Self-Reliance – Iraqi Security Forces

Britain Turns over Logistics Base to the ISF:

- The Shaibah logistics base, once the main center of British military operations in Iraq, was turned over to the Iraqi national army April 24 for use as a training base. The brief ceremony by British and Iraqi forces was the latest example of the Coalition's efforts to give Iraqi forces control over some parts of Iraq as British forces plan to begin withdrawing from southern Iraq where most of them are based.
- Two other British bases - al-Saie and Shatt al-Arab - were turned over to Iraqi forces in Basrah, Iraq's second largest city, in the last month.

Fourth Fallujah City Councilman Killed in Two Years:

- Fallujah city council chairman Sami Abdul-Amir al-Jumaili, a critic of al-Qaida who took the job after his three predecessors were assassinated, was killed April 21. The 65-year-old Sunni shaykh was the fourth city council chairman to be killed in 14 months as insurgents target fellow Sunnis willing to cooperate with the U.S. and Iraqi forces. Abdul-Amir's predecessor, Abbas Ali Hussein, was shot to death February 2.

Iraq's Yazidi Minority Demands Protection After Killings:

- Sectarian tensions are high in the Mosul area of northern Iraq following the killing of 23 members of the Yazidi minority (a small, ancient heterodox sect who are ethnic Kurds) and following the stoning death of a Yazidi woman who recently converted to Islam to marry a Sunni Muslim man.

The contract made with Ivanhoe Energy gives Inpex the benefit of keeping a majority stake, plus technology fees if the project is successful. To date, national electricity supply for 2007 is only one percent below 2006. Because demand is increasing, however, the relative decline in national hours of power is much larger: an average of 8.9 hours for January 1-March 14, 2007, compared with an average of 10.5 hours for the same period in 2006.
